Rutgers School of Public Affairs and Administration (SPAA) is the newest school at Rutgers University. Established in 2006, SPAA continues and expands the commitment to public service that began in the 1970s as the Department of Public Administration in the Graduate School. Over the years, public administration at Rutgers has become a recognized educational leader in preparing managers and professionals for the government and nonprofit sectors. Compared to 300+ public affairs and administration programs nationally, U.S. News and World Report ranks SPAA 7th nationally in Public Administration/Management. SPAA is accredited by NASPAA - the Network of Schools of Public Policy, Affairs, and Administration and is the first U.S. school to earn full international accreditation from ICAPA - The International Commission on Accreditation of Public Administration Education and Training Programs.

Guided by the principles of Knowledge, Competence, Diversity, Service and Ethics - with an emphasis on public service values and competencies for effective performance - SPAA promotes accountability, transparency, and performance in the public and nonprofit sectors. It’s mission is supported by a faculty of distinguished academic leaders who bring students current knowledge and active research agendas. Academic faculty are complemented by adjunct faculty members rich in relevant experience and dedicated to ensuring student access to applied skills and effective networks.

SPAA carries out its mission through academic and professional credit and non-credit programs at all levels of higher education. These academic programs are enhanced by a culture of learning through faculty publications, published journals and newsletters, conferences, prominent and provocative speakers, and meaningful student internships for pre-career, in-career, and career-changing students. Through its memorandums of understanding and collaborations with colleagues all over the world, SPAA provides its students with international networks and global opportunities for learning, practice, and career destinations.
