kudos: a selection of recent awards and honors received by Rutgers-Newark faculty and staff

Roland V. Anglin has been appointed director of the Joseph C. Cornwall Center for Metropolitan Studies, School of Public Affairs and Administration. Anglin comes to the Cornwall Center from the Edward J. Bloustein School of Planning and Public Policy at Rutgers-New Brunswick where he was Faculty Fellow since 2000. For seven years he served as the executive director of Bloustein’s Initiative for Regional and Community Transformation.

Katalin Balog, associate professor, philosophy, Faculty of Arts and Sciences, has received a Fulbright grant to conduct research at Collegium Budapest in Hungary.

Edna Y. Baugh, assistant director, Clinical Administration, School of Law-Newark, was selected as the recipient of the Oranges and Maplewood NAACP 2012 President’s Award for her contributions to promoting diversity, civil rights and social justice.

April Benasich, professor, Center for Molecular and Behavioral Neuroscience, is co-editor (with R. Holly Fitch) of Developmental Dyslexia: Early Precursors, Neurobehavioral Markers, and Biological Substrates (Brookes Publishing Co., March 2012). She also was one of three scientists to speak at the United Nations on World Autism Awareness Day, April 2, 2012.

Frances Bouchoux, senior associate dean, School of Law-Newark, was appointed 2011-2012 chair of the Amicus Committee of the National Association of Women Judges.

Anthony Braga, professor, School of Criminal Justice, has been elected to serve as executive counselor of the Division of Experimental Criminology of the American Society of Criminology. Also the Boston Police Department’s Safe Street Teams hot spots policing program, which Braga helped design, monitor and evaluate, received the Community Policing Award and the Excellence in Law Enforcement Research Award from the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

György Buzsáki, Rutgers Board of Governors Distinguished Professor of Neuroscience, Center for Molecular and Behavioral Neuroscience, was noted in the 2011-2012 winter issue of Inside New Jersey, The Star-Ledger magazine, as one of New Jersey’s 20 “brainiest” for his exceptional intellect and accomplishments.

Edna Cadmus, clinical professor, College of Nursing, has been selected to be inducted as a Fellow of the American Academy of Nursing.

John Cantwell, professor, Rutgers Business School, is the editor of the Journal of International Business Studies, which has been ranked in the Thomson Reuters Journal Citation Reports as one of the top three journals in the business category for citation impact.

Joel Caplan, assistant professor, School of Criminal Justice, received the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences Donal MacNamara Award for Outstanding Journal Publication, “Risk Terrain Modeling: Brokering Criminological Theory and GIS Methods for Crime Forecasting” (Justice Quarterly 2011, Vol. 28, No. 2), which he co-authored with Leslie Kennedy and Joel Miller. Caplan also received the Advancing Victim-Centered Knowledge Scholarly Paper Award from the National Center for Victims of Crime.

Kornel Chang, assistant professor, history, Faculty of Arts and Sciences, is the recipient of a Charles Warren Fellowship to study “The Politics of Knowledge in Universities and in the State” at the Charles Warren Center for Studies in American History at Harvard University.

Ariane Chebel d’Appollonia, associate professor, School of Public Affairs and Administration, is the author of Frontiers of Fear: Immigration and Insecurity in the United States and Europe (Cornell University Press, March 2012).

Ronald V. Clarke, professor, School of Criminal Justice, was honored with a Festschrift, The Reasoning Criminologist: Essays in Honour of Ronald V. Clarke (Routledge, 2011).

Steven J. Diner, immediate past chancellor of Rutgers-Newark, was appointed University Professor in December 2011.

Jon Dubin, professor and associate dean for clinical education, School of Law-Newark, was selected to be a member of the Administrative Conference of the United States Social Security Disability Adjudication Project Working Group.

Kyle Farmbry, associate professor, School Public Affairs and Administration, was named one of six Louis O. Kelso Fellows for the 2012-2013 academic year. He will be studying broad-based employee ownership plans and their use in poverty alleviation and community-wealth creation.
John Farmer Jr., dean, School of Law-Newark, has been selected to receive the 2012 William J. Brennan Award from the Association of the Federal Bar of New Jersey.

Alexander Gates, vice chancellor for research and professor, earth and environmental science, Faculty of Arts and Sciences, was recognized for Encyclopedia of Pollution, which he co-authored with Robert Blauvelt. Encyclopedia of Pollution was named one of two runners-up in the Nonfiction category of the 2012 Green Book Festival’s annual competition “honoring books that contribute to greater understanding, respect for and positive action on the changing worldwide environment.” The publication also was selected as a Library Journal “Best Reference Source.”

Deanna Gray-Miceli, assistant professor, College of Nursing, has been selected to be inducted as a Fellow of the American Academy of Nursing.

Anjum Gupta, assistant professor, School of Law-Newark, and director, Immigration Rights Clinic, was elected to the national Board of Directors of the Clinical Legal Education Association for a three-year term.

William L. Holzemer, dean, College of Nursing, was honored with Japan’s Order of the Rising Sun, Gold Rays with Neck Ribbon, for his outstanding contributions to the development of nursing science and the education of nursing professionals in Japan. He also was inducted into the 2012 International Nurse Researcher Hall of Fame.

Marc Holzer, dean, School of Public Affairs and Administration, was named the 2012 Messick Fellow at the School of Public Policy and Administration – University of Delaware. He also has been honored as a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration and is the co-author of “Restating the Relevance of Comparative Public Administration,” published in the Public Administration Review (2011).

Lucille A. Joel, professor, College of Nursing, received the Distinguished Alumni Award from the Alumni Association of the Teachers College of Columbia University. She also was awarded the Bergen Regional Medical Center Benefactor Award for her outstanding accomplishments and dedication to the patients and residents of Bergen Regional Medical Center. Moreover, Joel’s book, Advanced Practice Nursing: Essentials for Role Development (F. A. Davis Company, 2009), has been nominated for inclusion on the list of the Top 50 Must-Read Books for Nurses in 2012.

John P. Joergensen, professor, School of Law-Newark, has been appointed director of the law library.
Tayari Jones, associate professor, English and Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing Program, Faculty of Arts and Sciences, is a recipient of the 2011-2012 Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study Fellowship at Harvard University where she will focus on writing a new novel, Dear History.

Richard Keevey, Distinguished Practitioner in Residence, School of Public Affairs and Administration, has been honored as a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration.

Leslie Kennedy, University Professor, School of Criminal Justice, received the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences Donal MacNamara Award for Outstanding Journal Publication, “Risk Terrain Modeling: Brokering Criminological Theory and GIS Methods for Crime Forecasting” (Justice Quarterly 2011, Vol. 28, No. 2), which he co-authored with Joel Caplan and Joel Miller.

Joel Miller, assistant professor, School of Criminal Justice, received the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences Donal MacNamara Award for Outstanding Journal Publication, “Risk Terrain Modeling: Brokering Criminological Theory and GIS Methods for Crime Forecasting” (Justice Quarterly 2011, Vol. 28, No. 2), which he co-authored with Joel Caplan and Leslie Kennedy.

Larry Miller, assistant professor, School of Public Affairs and Administration, has been named a senior research affiliate by the Center on Reinventing Public Education at the University of Washington.

Eduardo Moncada, assistant professor, political science, Faculty of Arts and Sciences, is a Fellow of the New York University Postdoctoral and Transition Program for Academic Diversity at the Robert F. Wagner Graduate School.

Dan Morgenstern, recently retired director of the Institute of Jazz Studies, was awarded the Rutgers University Award, one of the university’s highest recognitions, for his exceptional contributions to Rutgers. He was also noted in the 2011-2012 winter issue of Inside New Jersey, The Star-Ledger magazine, as one of New Jersey’s 20 “brainiest” for his exceptional intellect and accomplishments.

dt ogilvie, professor, Rutgers Business School, and founding director, The Center for Urban Entrepreneurship and Economic Development, has been appointed dean of the E. Philip Saunders College of Business at Rochester Institute of Technology, effective August 1, 2012.
Thomas J. O’Reilly has been appointed director of The Police Institute, School of Criminal Justice. O’Reilly comes to Rutgers from the United States Department of Justice where he served as a senior policy advisor for the Bureau of Justice Assistance, Office of Justice Programs, since 2006, and director of the Nationwide Suspicious Activity Reporting Initiative Program Management Office since 2010.

Jayne Anne Phillips, director, Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing Program, received Rutgers’ Faculty Scholar-Teacher Award.

Norma Riccucci, professor and director of the PhD program, School of Public Affairs and Administration, has been honored as a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration. Also, her book, Public Administration: Traditions of Inquiry and Philosophies of Knowledge, was the winner of the 2012 Best Book Award from the Section on Public Administration Research of the American Society for Public Administration.

Dale Rogers, professor, Rutgers Business School, and co-director, Center for Supply Chain Management, received the 2012 Distinguished Service Award from the International Warehouse Logistics Association.

Alan Shark, assistant professor, School of Public Affairs and Administration, received the 2012 National Champion Award from the National Association for State Chief Information Officers and has been honored as a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration. Shark also was the keynote speaker of “Partnerships for Change: Domestic Violence, Sexual Abuse and Stalking,” co-sponsored by the Oklahoma Coalition Against Domestic Violence and the Oklahoma Office of the Attorney General, and “Responding to Domestic Violent,” co-sponsored by the Attorney General and New Mexico Coalition Against Domestic Violence.
Maggie Shiffrar, professor, psychology, Faculty of Arts and Sciences, has been appointed dean of the Graduate School—Newark.

Shirley Smoyak, professor, College of Nursing, has been named a recipient of the Lifetime Achievement Award given by the Network for Psychiatric Nurse Researchers, a division of the Royal College of Nursing in London, England. She also received an honorary doctor of humane letters from Kingston University and St. George’s University, University of London. Moreover, Smoyak received an honorary fellowship from the Royal College of Nursing, Liverpool, England.

Paula Tallal, co-director, Center for Molecular and Behavioral Neuroscience, was noted in the 2011-2012 winter issue of Inside New Jersey, The Star-Ledger magazine, as one of New Jersey’s 20 “brainiest” for her exceptional intellect and accomplishments.

George C. Thomas, Board of Governors Professor of Law and Judge Alexander P. Waugh Sr. Distinguished Scholar, School of Law-Newark, received the Rutgers School of Law-Newark Alumni Association 2012 Distinguished Service Award.

Frank Thompson, professor, School of Public Affairs and Administration, received the 2012 Donald C. Stone Distinguished Scholar Award from the Section on Intergovernmental Administration and Management of the American Society for Public Administration. He also has been honored as a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration and chaired the Mosher Award Committee to select the best article written by an academician for the 2011 volume of the Public Administration Review.

Joseph Voccaturo, assistant director, Physical Plant, accepted a Platinum Award from Meadowlink on behalf of Rutgers Newark Commuter Transit and Parking Services for its successful efforts to reduce the number of single occupancy vehicles on the roads.

Jerome Williams, Prudential Chair in Business, Rutgers Business School, and research director of The Center for Urban Entrepreneurship and Economic Development, was elected chair of the Board of Trustees of the American Marketing Association Foundation for a two-year term.

Junius Williams, director, Abbott Leadership Institute, received the Call to Service Award from President Barack Obama’s Council on Service and Civic Engagement.
Allan Wolper, professor, arts, culture and media, Faculty of Arts and Sciences, garnered first place for best Public Affairs/Radio Category from the New York Association of Black Journalists for his interview of former Harlem drug king Frank Lucas.

Yahong Zhang, assistant professor, School of Public Affairs and Administration, was selected to receive the 2012 Julia J. Henderson International Award by the Section for Women on Public Administration of the American Society for Public Administration. She also has co-authored two articles: “Participatory Budgeting in Local Government” Evidence from New Jersey Municipalities” published in the Public Performance and Management Review (Vol. 35, No. 2), and “Knowledge and Skills for Policy-Making: Stories from Local Public Managers in Florida” published in the Journal of Public Affairs Education (Vol. 18, No.1).